

Service Animal?

You can ask two questions to find out.

1. Is the dog a service animal required because of a disability?
2. What work or task has the animal been trained to perform?

SERVICE ANIMAL QUICK FACTS

- A service animal can be a dog or a miniature pony and is considered a working animal, rather than a pet.
- A service animal is not required to wear a vest or other identification.
- Service animals can accompany their handlers in any area where the public is normally allowed to go.
- Faculty and staff cannot inquire about the person's disability, request medical documentation or training documentation, or request to see the dog demonstrate its ability to perform a specific task.
